

Enabling change through effective TRAINING

The challenge of doing more with less

Effectively working with complex systems, processes and technologies, means organisations require professionals who work well as a team, solve problems efficiently and communicate clearly.

But these skills aren't always innate and smart organisations will develop their professionals to work better, think clearer and provide exemplary services to governments, citizens and clients.

This is where Ethos CRS comes in

Our facilitators have practical, hard-earned experience in writing, analysis, policy development and regulatory practice. They are critical thinkers, expert administrators and inspiring communicators. They have led organisations, managed budgets, designed complex policy and administered complicated programs. They deliver programs that create more effective, confident and competent professionals.

We improve performance and capability

Our approach is to work as a partner. We stick to those areas—organisational communications, policy, regulation, leadership and professional effectiveness—where we have something of value to offer—technical expertise, insights and experience. We focus on organisational capability by devising customised interventions that generate a return on an investment.

Simple, easy steps to create public value

Ethos CRS has worked with more than 90 agencies all around Australia and understands the challenges they face. So, to improve outcomes in your organisation and build the skills of your professionals, call our director of training, Stelle McCoy, on 02 6247 2225 or email service@ethoscrs.com.au.
